Managing Health Hazards from Welding fumes

Workplace Health
Leadership Group
Northern Ireland

&

The Chartered
Society for Worker
Health Protection

Northern Ireland industrial employers (specifically manufacturing) want to ensure they are protecting welders and other employees from welding fumes.

They are keen to ensure they implement the right control measures. However, the subject is complex, and the webinar will arm attendees with the knowledge and understanding to handle the risks.

Webinar speaker Neil Pickering is a Chartered Occupational Hygienist (CFOH) with considerable experience working for major manufacturing companies. He is current Chair of the BOHS Breathe Freely in Manufacturing campaign (an initiative that is focusing on welding).

During his presentation he'll be covering

- The health hazards
- Controlling the risk
- Effective Exposure Controls
- LEV
- BOHS Welding fume control selector tool
- Designing out to prevent fume
- Sources of guidance
- Q & A

Speaker bio

Neil Pickering is a Chartered Occupational Hygienist (CFFOH) and a Chartered Safety Practitioner (CMIOSH) with 30 years experience in HS&E.

In nearly 27 years at Rolls-Royce (Aerospace) he progressed through to Company Occupational Hygienist before switching to a wider HS&E role in the business that included two COMAH sites. Subsequent roles included Regional HS&E Director for North America, Head of H&S and Global Head of HS&E Services back in the UK.

For nearly 4 years Neil was the Group HS&E Director for JCB before setting up as an independent consultant. Neil chaired the MakeUK (EEF) OH&S Policy Committee for 9 years and has been actively involved with the British Occupational Hygiene Society including as Registrar for the Faculty of Occupational Hygiene and now chairing the Breathe Freely in Manufacturing campaign (focusing on welding). As a glutton for punishment he was also chair of Governors for the local primary school for 5 of his 7 years as a governor.
